Twilight has done it again! Reaching number one in the box office and reaching a total gross of $220,832,009, The Twilight Saga: Breaking Dawn Part 1 satisfies the anxious and enthusiastic two-hard fans all around the United States. The starring actors in the previous movies within the saga, Robert Pattinson as Edward Cullen, Kristen Stewart as Bella Swan, and Taylor Lautner as Jacob Black, never fail to give their best performances.

I am an avid reader of all of the Stephenie Meyer Twilight books, and in this film the exposition is a nourishing relief. Being an indecisive and unpredictable series, after the start of the movie, the viewer is able to breathe! It wouldn't be uncommon if tears came to their eyes as fans watched it.

Later on, the movie takes a turn to a more humorous, lighter side. Lighthearted banter and happiness fills the air around everyone. If viewers have read the books, they will know that Bella seems happy and she is... However, she's also filled with miserable internal conflict. As Edward and Bella move forward in the movie, they take their relationship to a new level, reassuring viewers even more.

Suddenly, when the surrounding situation seems perfect, a surprising twist makes everything turn for the worst. An obstacle has arisen, but the frightening part is no one knows how to conquer it; it's a mystery to everyone. Some outrageous lies and enormous betrayal come into play. Every single character is forced to make hasty decisions, with the clock ticking; guess about the unknown, and deal with their emotions. This movie will keep viewers at the edges of their seats even if they aren't familiar with the series. It will keep them predicting until the very end!
